

Not Killing and Liberating the Living

by Great Master Lyan Chr

An Obvious Retribution for Killing Ants

In Jyang Su Province, Jyang Ning County, the town of Jyan Jou, there lived a Mr. Jyu Sz-lyou. He took pleasure in gardening, planting flowers and landscaping. One day, because he wanted to plant some flowers, he dug up the earth and uncovered a nest of ants. The nest was a huge hole, as large as a rock, and inside there were teeming hordes of ants. Jyu Sz-lyou boiled water and poured the water down the hole, thereby killing all the ants. Then he filled the hole with dirt so that he could use the spot for planting flowers.

One summer's day in that same year, Jou Sz-lyou was sitting in his garden without his shirt on, in order to cool off in the fresh air. Suddenly he noticed that his entire body was covered with red spots. In a matter of moments, the red spots turned into blisters, and inside each blister there was an ant. His entire body was unbearably itchy. Within a few days he died.